The Role of the Islamic University in Developing Moral Values as Perceived by Its Students

Abstract : The aim of this study was to identify the most important values developed by the Islamic University of Gaza as perceived by the students themselves, and to reveal the differences in students responses due to (sex of student, academic level, type of college, place of residence).

To achieve these aims the researcher developed a questionnaire to measure values developed by the (I U G). The questionnaire was administered to students. The results revealed that the two more important values for students were: " To feel satisfied with God's judgment, and to believe that God's satisfaction comes as a result to parents satisfaction" There were no statistically significant differences between students responses due to (sex of student or place of residence). While there were differences due to type of collage in favour of Islamic science colleges, and there were differences due to academic level in favour of advanced levels (third, fourth and fifth).
